

Southern Women: Their Lives and Times

The University of Georgia Press is publishing biographical, life-and-times histories of women from the various southern states. Each book is a collection of insightful essays focused on the lives of individuals or small groups of women that address larger issues in the history of the state, the South, and the nation. These individual profiles will also contribute to an understanding of the history of women and gender roles in American society.

"Places women center stage in the complex, dramatic, and difficult history of this state through the 20th century. The interlaced hierarchies of race and gender have, for the most part, rendered women virtually invisible until now. While the stories of towering figures like Septima Clark and Jean Hoefler Toal will ring familiar, most of this volume reveals women working in schools, farms, factories, and an astonishing array of voluntary associations to improve education and health, challenge racial discrimination, and open opportunities for women. South Carolina is a better place because of their unsung efforts, and their compelling stories challenge us to reframe our understanding of the 20th century. This much needed book opens that possibility;"—Sara Evans, author of Born For Liberty: A History of Women in America
