STUDIES IN SECURITY AND INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

The University of Georgia Press in collaboration with the University of Georgia's Center for International Trade and Security and Department of International Affairs created this series to publish outstanding scholarship on some of the most pressing challenges of the twenty-first century. This series grows out of the dramatic internationalization of the University of Georgia: the creation of a new School of Public and International Affairs, the establishment of a new Department of International Affairs, and the continued growth of the Center for International Trade and Security and related programs.

We are particularly interested in work that presents important new perspectives on the crises in American foreign policy and global governance; democratization, civil society, and the rule of law; rising powers and regional hotspots such as the Middle East, Asia, Africa, and Latin America; new security threats, including terrorism and responses to it; defense policy; postconflict reconstruction; multilateralism and international institutions; and the U.S. role in the world. Books in this series draw from the fields of comparative politics, foreign policy, international relations, and security policy. The series crosses disciplines and attempts to bridge gaps, including those between the academy and government and between nations and "civilizations."

Series editors: Gary K. Bertsch and Howard J. Wiarda

Ebook, $17.47 | 978-0-8203-4380-8

Cloth, $48.97 | 978-0-8203-3689-3

"We need this book. Ogilvie-White and Santoro provide a timely, comprehensive analysis of how current threats are driving disarmament activists and hard-nosed strategists towards a common agenda. Arms control is the new realism. Professors and policymakers will benefit from their detailed, country-by-country assessment of the trends and challenges in the new nuclear security agenda."

—Joseph Cirincione, president of the Ploughshares Fund

"Presents a very innovative approach to understanding international negotiations. Combining thematic examinations of causes of failures with illustrative case studies, this book provides a structured approach to the field. It allows even those readers who are not versed in negotiation theory to grasp both basic concepts and contextual complexities in a very helpful way."

—Pamela Aall, United States Institute of Peace
